

Full Stack Developer position at Boxhead

Boxhead is a design & development studio with a creative and strategic understanding of all things brand. We are known for designing articulate, succinctly developed websites and integrated branding.... Delivering effective projects that our clients love since 2010.

There is a new opportunity for a talented full stack developer to work with an ambitious design and development team focused on producing beautiful and effective websites and applications for a wide range of clients. This role is perfect for a junior to mid level developer who is ready to step into a role with more responsibility and the opportunity for closer project involvement and collaboration.

You will work directly with the technical director (Matt Jones) and creative director (David Sorley) as well as our wider team. You must have a strong eye for design detail and be in your absolute element swimming in code. You must be able to hold your own in regular project meetings and be able to follow creative and technical direction.
